MORE than 800 performers paraded along Kingsland Road in near-perfect weather for Hackney One Carnival 2011.

Seventeen different carnival groups put on a memorable show as they danced from Ridley Road Market in Dalston to Stoke Newington.

Steel pan band Pantonic were among the musicians holding the beat, while the colourful carnival groups ranged from the red and white of Paraiso

(featuring lead dancers, above) to the plush golds of Heritage and costumes inspired by African folklore. Businesses and residents welcomed the procession's arrival in Stoke Newington by lining Church Street with bunting and cheers. Turn to pages 6-7

ASB CRACKDOWN SUCCESS

A LCOHOL-related anti-social behaviour (ASB) in Hackney has fallen by 44 per cent in the last year, following a joint campaign between the Council and the police.

The Designated Public Place Order – introduced by Hackney last spring – gives police powers to ask drinkers displaying anti-social behaviour to stop. They can confiscate alcohol and issue a fine to anyone who refuses to give up the alcohol when asked.

The powers are not aimed at those enjoying the occasional glass of wine or beer in a Hackney park, but the small minority of people whose excessive drinking leads to aggressive or intimidating behaviour.

Responding to the evaluation,

Deputy Mayor of Hackney Cllr Sophie Linden said: "These results demonstrate our commitment to improving Hackney by working together. Despite the recent unrest, residents have told us that our work has made a difference. However, we know there is still more to be done to tackle alcohol-related anti-social behaviour in some areas of the borough and we will continue to work with our partners and communities to address this."

Jane Easton, Chief Inspector for Safer Neighbourhoods at Hackney Police, added: "These powers are not intended to disrupt peaceful activities but – as demonstrated by the reduction in ASB – help to ensure Hackney is a pleasant place to live and visit."

New council homes built

RESIDENTS have begun moving into new Council homes, the first to be built in the borough for 30 years.

Construction work at Goldcrest Mews and Dunnock Mews, both in E5, was completed over the summer, and residents have been relocating to the 73 new houses and flats, built by the Council and managed by Hackney Homes. The developments were built on the former Ottaway Court and Rendlesham House sites.

On 16 September, Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Housing, together with local Hackney Downs ward councillors Alex Russell and Rick Muir, paid a visit and met up with new tenant Calmeta Clarke at Dunnock Mews.

“Goldcrest and Dunnock have been completed and the tenants are moving in and are delighted with their new homes”

Hackney received funding in 2009 from the Homes and Communities Agency to build the new homes as part of the Six Estates Regeneration Programme. This initiative is overseen by the Six Estates Steering Group, made up of Clapton residents representing Bridge House, Marian Court, Tower Court, and Alexandra National House, as well as Dunnock Mews and Goldcrest Mews.

George McGee, Chair of the Six Estates Steering Group, said: “Goldcrest and Dunnock have been completed and the tenants are moving in and are delighted with their new homes. Alexandra and Bridge are now under way, building has begun and will be completed by March 2012 giving Hackney residents a better quality of housing.”

Cllr Glanville added: “The Council has pledged to provide new homes for tenants, and Dunnock

Mews and Goldcrest Mews – the first to be built of the Six Estates Regeneration Programme – demonstrate that we are delivering on that commitment.

“Hackney is one of the top-performing authorities – in London and nationally – in terms of providing affordable homes, both re-provision and new, consistently beating Greater London Authority targets in recent years.

“Between 2008 and 2011, Hackney delivered the second highest number of homes for social and intermediate renting and home ownership, through the National Affordable Housing Programme in London, with 2,335.”

A call to arts

Dance Nations Dalston in Gillett Square was one of the performing acts from CREATE10 summer festival

ARTISTS living or working in Hackney are invited to submit entries for the Bank of America Merrill Lynch CREATE Art Award – the largest participatory art award in the UK.

CREATE is the cultural partnership of the host boroughs for the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. The boroughs are working with leading east London-based arts organisations, venues and practitioners to develop CREATE into an internationally significant annual culture festival in the lead up to, and beyond, 2012.

The award aims to open up exciting opportunities for local artists to work with other residents of the London 2012 host boroughs.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Hackney Council Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: “The arts are thriving in Hackney and the CREATE Art Award not only provides a platform to showcase the creativity found in Hackney, but also brings together artists and residents to celebrate Hackney through the arts. 2012 will be the year of the Cultural Festival for our Games, and the CREATE Art Award sits at the centre of that Festival, a perfect opportunity to show the world the very best of our creative talent.”

The total value of the commission is £50,000 and will be awarded in December this year with the view of the work being completed by June or July 2012.

CREATE welcomes proposals from artists working in all media. Deadline for submissions is 5pm, 28 October.

News in brief

Sporting heroes honoured

WORLD-class Hackney sporting stars have been rewarded for their achievements at this year's Balfour Beatty London Youth Games Hall of Fame and Awards evening. Former Hackney Downs School pupil Dalton Grant (pictured below holding an award) represented the borough in athletics in his younger years before going on to compete at three Olympic Games and win five major championship medals in high jump.

Elaine Barratt, who swam for the borough in disability competitions at the London Youth Games, has won 36 medals at international level, including Paralympic gold in the 100m breaststroke SB11 (blind) class in Athens in 2004.

Both athletes were inducted into the hall of fame alongside individuals and organisations who helped make this year's youth event the most successful in its 34-year history, with a record 71,000 participants.

The awards took place at the Nursery Pavilion, Lord's Cricket Ground, on 20 September.

Nine weeks to go to bid for 2012 media centre space

BUSINESSES and organisations interested in moving into the 2012 media centres in Hackney Wick once the Games are finished have nine weeks to put in a formal bid.

Start-ups to established international companies are invited to apply to become part of a new commercial district within the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park.

The Olympic Park Legacy Company (OPLC) has opened the process to agree tenants for the Press and Broadcast Centre site, which will be surrounded by world-class sporting venues, parkland and a host of events and attractions.

Jules Pipe, elected Mayor of Hackney, said: “The Press and Broadcast

Centres offer an unprecedented opportunity to create a new employment hub in Hackney Wick. They will have world-class communications infrastructure and will be served by excellent new transport links.

“It has been our vision for some time to see the site used for the expansion of the creative and digital industries which are already thriving in Hackney. It is a shame that the BBC have abandoned plans that would have seen them become an anchor tenant of the site, but we are pleased that there is significant interest from other parties that will now be taken forward.”

Andrew Altman, Chief Executive of the OPLC, said: “The Press and Broadcast Centres have already generated a huge amount of commercial interest and we are excited to see what bids come forward.”

Woodberry Down wins award

WOODBERRY Down has won the Daily Telegraph British Homes Build Quality category for Social Housing of the Year.

Earlier this year residents began moving into the first 117 new homes for social renting to be built in the 20-year project.

The 117 new homes are a range of one, two and three-bedroom apartments, built by Berkeley Homes with funding from the Homes and Communities Agency, and managed by Genesis Housing Association.

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Housing, said: “The Council has pledged to provide high quality new homes and community facilities for residents at Woodberry Down, and this award recognises one of the first steps in helping to realise this.”

The Council with partners Berkeley Homes and Genesis Housing Association are leading the delivery of Woodberry Down's regeneration.

The next homes due to be completed for social renting will be at the Woodberry Grove North site.

From a dog show to street parties, We Love Hackney Weekend offered two days of top-notch entertainment

CHEEKY brass band pop covers and 'ratty' escapades outside a borough church – Hackney streets and landmarks were filled with prime entertainment for 'We Love Hackney Weekend'.

Taking place over 17-18 September, the two-day festival offered live shows, architecture tours, community workshops across the borough, as well as the return of Hackney One Carnival (see page 6).

Wilton Way in Hackney Central, a strip that put on other popular outdoor events over the summer, saw residents enjoy events like a red-carpeted dog show searching for the best-looking canines (and their owners); the performing funky brass band versions of modern pop classics; and a 'Come Dine with Me' style food contest.

David McHugh, who owns businesses in Wilton Way, said: "It's been really good – throughout the day there were hundreds of people that came along, it seemed to be a hit."

Linda Curry, of Daubney Road, added: "It's been great, really good. It's events like this that help to bring people together and raise awareness of the kinds of businesses we have locally."

Outside St-John-at-Hackney Church, E8, the grounds were transformed into a market selling everything from homemade jams and relish to African ornaments and children's clothes, all to the background sounds of drumming and jazz piano. A bright yellow double-decker children's play bus also kept the crowds amused. More fun for kids was provided along the Narrow Way by children's theatre performers dressed up as escaping church mice, juggling and giant board games.

During the rainy periods, people were encouraged to pop inside to Hackney Museum, to try out making their own comic strip, or visit the historic buildings of Sutton House, St Augustine's Tower and the Hackney Empire, which also hosted the Robert Levy Foundation's annual community event to a 1000-strong audience.

Hackney Empire chief executive Clarie Middleton said: "The Empire buzzed with more than 1,000 visitors, artists and audiences celebrating Hackney past and present. The Robert Levy Foundation were able to showcase the talents of local young people on the main stage whilst all around them we welcomed visitors on tours of the theatre to find out about our history and our plans for the future."

Hackney Mayor Jules

Pipe added: "It was heartening to see so many members of the local community and businesses take part in the day, which highlighted just a small section of the great cultural and business offer, the forthcoming Olympic and Paralympic Games and great community venues we have here in Hackney."

Spirit of carnival

Crowds lined the streets to watch 800 performers in the Hackney One Carnival 2011

GLITZ and music rang true in the borough when Hackney One Carnival 2011 danced its way through Dalston and Stoke Newington.

Starting from Ridley Road Market, the 18 September party saw more than 800 performers from 17 different Carnival groups led by Brouhaha – six giant puppets – and a group of 16 Hackney Youth Ambassadors handing out whistles and waving at passersby.

One of the ambassadors, 14-year-old Nadeer Abdullahi from Petchey Academy, stepped into the breach and agreed at the last minute to bear a puppet when the regular performer dropped out. “It was great fun. I’d like to do it again,” said Nadeer.

The parade was a collage of sound and colour, ranging from the black and gold feathers of Heritage, and the red and white of Paraiso to the vivid yellows, greens and pinks of Kinetika’s huge Carnival Queen. “The crowds along the way were shouting and blowing whistles,” said Hackney Host Brian

Atiase, who walked with Kinetika from Ridley Road. “It was worth getting up at 8am on a Sunday for,” he added. Many spectators joined in – one crowd of women were spotted with pushchairs dancing to the beat of the Urban Touch youth group.

The Council has been running Hackney One Carnival in the borough for four years

DID YOU KNOW?

An intriguing performance came from the African-inspired figures from Yaram Arts – bare-footed characters sporting leaves and twigs, cowrie shells, gourds and a sheep's head. A local family of unicyclists met the parade and joined in – James Kruger and his 10-year-old son Jeb, in their matching glittery costumes and face-paint, had honed their skills in unicycle hockey.

There was a huge reception in Stoke Newington where businesses along Church Street sported bunting, and welcomed the parade. Sitting in the sun with her family in a prime spot outside Mercado's Mexican restaurant, resident Nanette said: "It's a nice community thing. It's good to see people enjoying themselves."

And keeping the rhythm throughout were the steel drums of the young people from Pantonic, who played non-stop for three hours.

Hackney One Carnival was organised by the Council's 2012 Unit and community groups.

The East London Pride march started outside Hackney Town Hall with around 500 people involved in the peaceful parade

A pint of Pride

EAST London Pride march saw around 500 people turn out in celebration of lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) communities.

The peaceful event, which started at Hackney Town Hall on a sunny Saturday afternoon, was hailed a success by organisers.

Parade director Ali Press said: "We were delighted with the success of this year's parade. The crowd who took part in the march showed immense support and pride for our community and all seemed to be having a fantastic time. Our thanks go to Hackney and Tower Hamlets Police who helped make the event possible."

The 24 September procession also carried placards and chanted slogans, shouting out against racism and homophobia along the one-hour parade, which ended in a busy festival of music, cabaret and debate.

Terry Stewart, founding member of East London Pride, said: "We had an excellent day with some fantastic outcomes for Hackney's LGBT community and the wider population. For people to see such a vivid, diverse display of people from old to young and of different ethnicities celebrating their sexuality, provides excellent visibility and hopefully reaches out to those who want to be part of a totally inclusive group. We had lots of support from volunteers meaning the parade could run at very little cost as well as adding to the community spirit of the event. We hope and expect next year's march to be even bigger and better."

The Cheri on top

Cheri Class has received an MBE in recognition of her work helping thousands of young people across Hackney for over 40 years

ONE of the borough's longest standing youth workers who has helped hundreds of thousands of young people in Hackney has been awarded an MBE in recognition of her work.

"I've always had an affection for Hackney," said Cheri Class, who retired last March after more than 40 years' service. "My grandmother lived in the area so I spent a lot of time here growing up and the young people of Hackney are some of the best young people I have ever met."

Cheri started her career as a PE teacher at Clissold Park School (then Stoke Newington School)

after completing her training. Her attraction to education and a desire to help young people was inspired by her mother – who was also a teacher – and a love of school, sports in particular. Cheri excelled in dance and gymnastics and represented London for diving – ranking third in the capital.

After four years teaching, she was asked to head up Clissold Park Youth Centre. This is where most of her career was spent, creating programmes and workshops for up to 100 children every evening. Classes covered subjects from weight-lifting to needlework to Turkish music, and there was always a strong emphasis on life and social skills, with support on hand for careers advice, job applications and interview techniques.

Cheri said: "Sadly, not all young people have the same opportunities. It was vital that we recognised those that needed that extra support and provide the encouragement and education needed to set them on the right path.

"I have so many stories of people I've worked with going off into a wide range of careers, anything from a magistrate to a musician. The important thing is not what they do or how much they earn, it's that they are happy, well-rounded, good individuals."

The final chapter of Cheri's full-time career was spent as locality manager for the north of the borough providing help for unit managers of youth centres and overseeing the programmes delivered to ensure they were well prepared, relevant and properly executed.

Cheri's dedication to the youth in Hackney will see her honoured by the Queen in a ceremony at Buckingham Palace on 12 October. She said: "Friends and local MPs wrote letters to nominate me for an MBE, I had no idea this was happening and felt so honoured when I received the invitation."

Since retiring Cheri is now mentoring a youth work student and is looking to do more voluntary youth work in the future.

"One of the best things about my job has been that people I've helped more than 30 years ago still stop me to say hello and to tell me what they are up to. I always feel very proud of what they've achieved, it's almost like having thousands of children," she added.

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: On my way to work I pass many small shops from groceries to newsagents, and I have never seen any recycling bins? Why is that residents are told to recycle but business don't do anything about it?

A: Shops and businesses are able to use commercial recycling services to collect and recycle their waste. The Council as well as a number of private organisations provide this service and many shops across the borough are recycling. The commercial waste team will be launching an improved commercial recycling service this autumn. At present there is no legal obligation for businesses to recycle.

Harvesting the Fields

Community food growing spaces from across the borough, including Bea's Tarts (inset) came together for the harvest festival at London Fields

LONDON Fields Farmers' Market celebrated the harvest festival this year by offering produce grown in Hackney community spaces.

Local fruit, vegetables and preserves were sold at the 25 September event supported by The Capital Growth project, which aims to create neighbourhood food growing spaces across London.

Louis Schulz of London Fields Farmers' Market said: "I think it's fantastic that you can now buy food that has never left Hackney. If you don't have your own allotment or back garden where you can grow food, you need to seek out markets such as this in order to get super-fresh, low-food-mile vegetable or fruit."

As well as food and live music, the market had plenty of other harvest festival activities on offer, including a scarecrow-making workshop.

Capital Growth offers practical help, grants, training and support to groups wanting to establish community food growing projects as well as advice to landowners.

The initiative has also launched a Garden Hero competition to find and celebrate people who stand out in developing community growing spaces. A £250 project prize will go to the winner.

The deadline for nominations is 10 October.

The country comes to town

ALMOST 900 pupils from primary schools across the borough gathered to experience the countryside life in the middle of London.

Countryside Live was created by Lee Valley Regional Park in partnership with the Countryside Foundation for Education. The idea is to bring the classroom into the countryside and provide London-based children and teachers with a memorable and educational rural experience, said organisers.

The two-day event, which took place on Leyton Marsh over 21-22 September, included activities and demonstrations to help portray what the countryside is all about. These included a giant hive to show how bees make honey; hands-on activities such as willow weaving, wood turning and butter making; as well as meeting cows, sheep, rabbits, ducklings, pigs and other animals.

Shaun Dawson, chief executive of the Lee Valley Regional Park Authority, said: "It's an incredible opportunity for children to do things they normally wouldn't do, understand how life in the countryside really works and simply get close enough to touch the animals."

Junk in the trunk

AROUND 500kg of unwanted household items were donated for reuse at the Give or Take Day recycling event at Leabank Square last month.

More than 100 people turned out to support the event – organised by the Council's Recycling Team and funded by North London Waste Authority – which was part of the Hackney Wick Festival (17 September).

Residents picked up useful recycling advice from the information stall, and there were recycling fishing games for younger attendees available throughout the day.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "It is gratifying to continually have so many residents supporting the Give or Take days.

"They are fun and a successful way to divert materials from entering the waste stream. I hope many more people are encouraged to come along to our recycle and reuse activities in the future."

The next Give or Take recycling event takes place on 15 October, 11am-3pm, at Petchey Academy, Shacklewell Lane, E8 2EY.

Phaedra's Love

Until 22 October, Arcola Theatre, 24 Ashwin Street, E8 3DL

SARAH Kane's modern adaptation of Seneca's Phaedra explores the brutal side of love and social relationships. The Arcola Theatre is hosting the dark comic revival Phaedra's Love, which delves into the doomed love of Phaedra for her stepson Hippolytus.

Unlike the original this version focuses on Hippolytus and his emotional cruelty that pushes Phaedra to the brink. The play is known for its on-stage violence as well as its witty and cynical dialogue. Sarah, whose controversial plays first challenged British theatre in the 1990s, described Phaedra's Love as 'my comedy'.

MOZART'S REQUIEM

Hackney Singers with the Forest Philharmonic Orchestra directed by Mark Shanahan

PREVIEW

Gilbert and Sullivan

5-23 October, Rosemary Branch Theatre, N1

A mini festival of Gilbert and Sullivan revivals are to be shown in Hackney to commemorate the centenary anniversary of W.S. Gilbert's death.

The acclaimed Charles Court Opera will be presenting a double bill of The Zoo and Trial By Jury, as well as The Mikado.

The Zoo is a one-act operatic comedy consisting of five eccentric characters that play out their nonsensical domestic turmoil in the unlikely location of London Zoo.

The young opera and theatre company is the only professional outfit in the UK with The Zoo in its repertoire, having performed it over the last three years at The International Gilbert and Sullivan festivals in Buxton, Derbyshire and Pennsylvania, USA.

Trial By Jury is a cheerful parody of the British judiciary and legal system. The production, famous for being the first surviving opera by Gilbert and Sullivan, has been given a modern make-over which sees the piece transformed into a TV talk show with the audience acting in the role of the jury. The Mikado is a witty satire of British politics and institutions set in a fictional Japanese town.

OMA/Progress exhibition

Barbican Gallery, 6 Oct 2011-19 Feb 2012, EC2Y

'Every architect carries the utopian gene,' says Dutch architect Rem Koolhaas, who founded one of his industry's most influential movements 'OMA'. 'OMA/Progress' will explore the role the movement has played in shaping the contemporary world, with an unprecedented display of materials, relics, documentation, imagery and models that give fresh perspectives on built and unbuilt projects and cultural ideas. In recognition of the concepts inspiring OMA, the west entrance of Barbican Gallery will be opened up for the first time in the building's history, making the exhibition spaces directly accessible from the high walks of the Barbican estate.

A different approach

Journalist Polly Toynbee (inset) and comedian Eddie Izzard have recently visited BSix College, which is up for several TES awards

BSix College is up for three gongs from The Times Educational Supplement.

The weekly newspaper for schools and college staff published the Star Awards shortlist in September, nominating the Clapton college for provider of the year; outstanding innovation in teaching, learning and training; and outstanding communications and marketing team prizes.

Rebekah Harris, head of external relations, said: "We are absolutely thrilled to have achieved this success. We see awards as tributes to the hard work, dedication and talents of our students and staff."

One example of BSix's advances has been the success of its politics club, which sees notaries give talks and take questions.

Guests Eddie Izzard and Ken Livingstone both attended last month. Other speakers since launch include Liberal Democrat thinker Richard Grayson.

The college received additional attention when journalist Polly Toynbee met with staff and students for a BBC Radio 4 show. Students spoke of how the college has helped boost their confidence to apply for higher education, and headteacher Ken Warman explained the importance of promoting aspirations and giving students a 'public school experience'.

The winners of the Star Awards will be announced on 11 November.

News in brief

Secondary school 2012 application deadline looms

PARENTS and carers have until 31 October to submit their child's application for a secondary school place.

Completed 'common application forms' (CAFs), which ask for preferred schools, must be returned this month to ensure a secured spot for the start of the 2012 school year. For faith schools, a supplementary form must also be completed. CAFs are available from the www.eadmissions.org.uk; supplementary forms can be picked up at the school and The Learning Trust.

Further information on local education was presented at the annual Hackney Secondary Schools' Fair at The Urswick School – formerly Hackney Free and Parochial School – on 13 September.

The event showcased Hackney secondary schools and gave families a chance to meet teachers as well as hear about student life directly from pupils.

Leyla McNicholas, of Grazebrook Primary School, attended the fair with her mother Shirley. She said: "You have to think about which subjects you like and whether the schools are specialised in that area. I like Maths. It has been good to hear from the schools and from other pupils."

Omowunmi Fagbamila with daughter Zainab added: "It was nice how the pupils were there. I think I will make my decision later, I have a few schools in mind. I love Hackney and the schools here – the new buildings are fantastic."

Speaking at the fair, acting chief executive of The Learning Trust Steve Belk was pleased with the 'real buzz' around borough secondary schools with children succeeding irrespective of their background. He also advised that families think about the right school for the child and consider the order of preference.

Free family fun

'STARTING New Adventures Together' is the theme of this year's Family Learning Festival.

The two-week festival aims to bring families together through taking part in fun, informal learning activities in accessible locations all over Hackney.

The free activities and workshops cover a wide-range of subjects including Spanish language, food, music, arts and crafts, maths and hula hooping.

The Learning Trust's Family Learning Manager, Seema Khan, said: "This year's Family Learning Festival will be the best ever for our families. We hope that the festival will create lots of opportunities for them to spend quality time through having fun and learning together through a range of different and exciting activities."

The programme has been coordinated by the Family Learning Team at The Learning Trust,

The two-week festival offers activities and workshops

Hackney children's centres and Hackney libraries in association with local heritage centres and community groups.

Stop, lock and listen

Laburnum Boat Club members have launched their visual and audio artwork

YOUNG members of Hackney's Laburnum Boat Club have created visual and audio art for the Central line as part of a London Underground cultural initiative.

Artist Ruth Ewan and composer Kerry Andrew worked with more than 40 youngsters to create the commission A Lock Is A Gate.

The concept considers a canal lock, which is used so boats can pass between

“ It has been a great experience to work with this group of young people from Hackney ” different water levels. More philosophically the exhibition reflects obstacles in life that seem impassable at first but can be overcome. Drawings and an accompanying song album are used to explore the idea.

The songs recount a journey along the Regent's Canal and uses sounds from the water and the capital.

Cathy Haynes, Curator for Art on the Underground, which organised the project, said: “I hope Tube travellers will enjoy the songs and artworks that the young members of Laburnum Boat Club have created for them. It has been a great experience to work with this group of young people from Hackney who have volunteered their time and creative energies to help make something for us all to enjoy.”

MORE than 100 young people in Hackney gave up their free time this summer for a project benefiting residents.

The inspirational teenagers aged between 13 and 19 cooked healthy meals for homeless people, maintained local community gardens and ran summer clubs and buddy schemes for children.

Taking part in the Young Hackney Project scheme, the volunteers also organised events to raise money for local charities. This included a football tournament to fundraise for the Jahmal Mason-Blair Trust: a charity dedicated to raising the awareness of knife and gun crime after Jahmal was killed for breaking up a fight in 2009. The event on Mabley Green Park raised £314 for the trust.

The volunteering

Volunteers raised funds for an anti-weapon crime charity

Lottery funding for budding Spielbergs

THOUSANDS of pounds have been allocated to a project helping Hackney young people not in education, employment or training produce short films alongside professional filmmakers.

Chocolate Films was awarded more than £25,000 of lottery funding for its Home project, an initiative that will see it produce two films with a 30-strong group of 16 to 19 year olds. The funding also covers a second part of the project for Birmingham teenagers.

The first Hackney-based film will be a gritty drama about difficulties arising in the search for independence. Rachel Wang from Chocolate Films said: “Because the young people making the film have direct experience of the challenges of independent living they are uniquely positioned to create a compelling and realistic film.”

The second will address the issue of violence and the circumstances leading up to it with the narrative being told using flashbacks.

All the ideas for the films have come from the group, who have been involved with every aspect of the production process from drawing storyboards and writing the scripts to directing and lighting the films with filmmakers.

The money was distributed by First Light, a charity helping young people develop creativity and confidence through digital projects. Chocolate Films is also looking for Hackney votes in its search for a second grant – the Natwest Community Force fund.

The £6,000 prize supports people, projects and charities making a difference to local communities. To get involved in the Home Project, call: 020 7793 4287; or e-mail: alessandra@chocolatefilms.com. For the fund, visit: communityforce.natwest.com

Calling Local Artists! Public Artwork Tender

Manor House Development Trust invites project proposals from an individual artist or artist-led organisation for a public artwork to celebrate the brand new Redmond Community Centre at Woodberry Down. Funding for this public art commission has been given by Hackney Council.

The successful artist or artist-led organisation will:

- Live or work in East London
- Have an understanding of the local area and its wider issues
- Work in collaboration with local stakeholders to develop a project that will create an innovative artwork for the new Redmond Community Centre

Our vision is that the artwork will act as a focal point for the centre, enhancing the space and creating a sense of civic pride amongst the communities that live and work in and around the surrounding area.

Residents back adult care services

More than 76 per cent of the Council's adult care service users rated their social care-related life as 'good'

RESIDENTS have given Hackney's adult social care service the thumbs-up, according to latest survey results.

The Council's adult social care department is responsible for providing care and support to adults and older people across the borough.

More than 740 service users were questioned, with over 76 per cent of respondents measuring their social care-related quality of life as 'good'. This considered areas of care such as having control over their own lives, food and drink, comfort and cleanliness of the home, feeling safe, social contact, spending time doing things of value or enjoyment and self esteem. The figure was 85 per cent for people with learning disabilities.

Sixty-two per cent of respondents were satisfied with overall services. Those with learning disabilities rated their satisfaction levels as 97 per cent.

The Council also scored well in providing good access to information, with 70 per cent of respondents saying that facts on services were easy to find.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health and Community Services, said: "Our adult social care service is one the Council's most important as it deals with some of the borough's most vulnerable residents."

He added: "The results indicate that they feel the Council is helping them to experience a good quality of life."

News in brief

Fashionable fundraisers at the Vintage Midnight Walk

Fashion and football raise money for hospice

MORE than £20,000 has been raised for two hospices through a Vintage Midnight Walk on Hackney's streets. A procession of 150 men and women donned fascinators, feather boas and other 1940s-style wear for St Joseph's Hospice in Hackney and Richard House Children's Hospice, Beckton. The fashionable fundraisers paraded from Kingsland Road Shopping Centre, through to Shoreditch, Old Street and the City.

St Joseph's Hospice, which provides a broad range of free services to enrich the lives of patients and their families, has also secured a year-long partnership deal with east London football team Leyton Orient FC. Residents at the hospice, such as Roy Russell (pictured above right), have already received a visit from some players from the team and Orient are lining up a number of activities to raise money for St Joseph's. These will include a primary schools penalty shoot out, with the final being held at the Leyton Orient home ground at The Matchroom Stadium, as well as some matches being dedicated to the hospice in the hope of raising money for and awareness of the charity.

Michael Kerin, chief executive of St Joseph's Hospice, said: "We're immensely grateful to the Football League for their support of the hospice and are really looking forward to working with Leyton Orient and their fans through the season."

"We see this partnership as a valuable way of telling more people about the care, support and advice we provide patients and their families across east London as well as a vital source of extra income to enable us to continue to provide that care."

Tobacco machines stubbed out

THE sale of tobacco products from vending machines has been banned by Government.

It is now illegal for pubs, clubs, restaurants and other vendors to sell tobacco using the automatic dispensers – regardless of the buyer's age. Advertising on the machines has also been prohibited.

Machines must be removed or taken out of operation by having payment slots blocked, products removed and advertising covered.

The law applies throughout England, and businesses flouting the law may be fined up to £2,500 if they are found guilty of selling tobacco from a vending machine.

The penalty is raised to £5,000, with a possible six-month jail term if the machine also displays advertising.

Under-16s was the age group most likely to use the automatic vendors, according to research that spearheaded the ban.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for

Neighbourhoods, said "Our trading standards team has written to businesses to remind them of their obligations, and we urge anyone with an installed cigarette vending machine to act in plenty of time to ensure it is removed or taken out of action."

For more information, contact the trading standards team on 020 8356 4929

Clockwise from above: The asylum on Lower Clapton Road; map location from 1864 to 1933; an annual report dating 1887 to 1888.

Home schooling

THERE is a story that the founders of the 'British Asylum for Deaf and Dumb Females' were inspired to start the home when two deaf women walked in the road – and into the path of their horse-drawn carriage.

Alerted to the difficulties these women face, Mr and Mrs Sutton got together an organisation to educate, self-supporting lives, as well as a permanent home for those unable to support themselves.

Inmates were admitted from the age of 10, with free places offered by vote of the governors and subscribers. Training lasted three years and included housework, laundry work and dressmaking as well as ordinary school education.

“There was no similar home in the kingdom, the inmates coming mostly from unions throughout the country” train and give religious instruction to adult deaf females.

The home, established in 1851 and provocatively titled today, served both as a place where deaf girls and women could receive training to lead

Having begun life in Stamford Hill, the home moved to Eagle House, Homerton, in 1857 and then to 179 Lower Clapton Road in 1864, remaining on this site until 1933.

This house was a notable Clapton landmark: built between 1710 and 1714 by china and glassware merchant Markham Eeles, earning it the popular nickname of 'Piss Pot Hall'. Eeles died in 1731 and in the second half of the 18th century the house was occupied by William Bowman, a banker. Later it was bought by Mr Skinner Turner who lived there until his death in 1860, before it was acquired by the Trustees of the British Asylum for Deaf and Dumb Females.

The house's features included beautiful wrought iron entrance gates, flanked by brick piers, surmounted by stone vases, a staircase of panelled oak, a tiled room that might have been a butler's pantry because of the iron safe built into the wall and a small space that could have been a ladies' 'powder closet'.

In the early 1930s, the Council was looking for sites to build much-needed housing for local people. The site was selected as suitable because it was reasonably central, had frontage on two main roads, and was close to schools, trams, buses and trains. Cllr W.R. Power, ex-Mayor of Hackney and treasurer of the home, made a strong appeal to the Government enquiry on behalf of the asylum stating that 'there were 37 inmates at the home, which had been in existence since 1851. They received a grant for work and women passed through the home were sent to situations all over the country. There was no similar home in the kingdom, the inmates coming mostly from unions throughout the country'.

He added that the home had 'invested funds, subscriptions, a grant from the Board of Education and had the most interested and influential committee in Hackney'.

Strong representations were also made to save the historic building that the home occupied on the grounds that it was one of the few surviving examples in the borough of a mansion from the Queen Anne period.

Despite these appeals, the enquiry found in favour of the Council, enabling it to compulsorily purchase the site.

Powell House, the building that replaced the home, as well as the other sites on Lower Clapton Road, was opened in May 1934 with 198 flats providing accommodation for about 900 people.

However, alternative accommodation was found for the home within the borough, not far away at 26 Clapton Common, in a purpose-built property designed by A. Rubens Cole. The home stayed at this address until 1986.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

The Hoxton Apprentice is a social enterprise set up to train unemployed Hackney people – both in the kitchen and front of house.

Six-month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain a NVQ in Hospitality. Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed people. If you would like to offer an apprentice a job, or become an apprentice yourself, call Ben Anderson on: 020 7749 2800.

Biodiversity Action Plan

THERE is still time to have your say in the Council's draft Biodiversity Action Plan. Residents are being asked to comment on Council proposals to protect and enhance local wildlife over the next six years.

Biodiversity is the range of wildlife – both plants and animals – around us and the places where they live.

In an urban area such as Hackney, it plays a vital role in cleaning the air, reducing the effect of hot temperatures in summer and helping control water run-off to limit the chance of flooding.

Residents have until 24 October to comment on the plan. To have your say, complete an online questionnaire at www.hackney.gov.uk/biodiversity-consultation.

A paper questionnaire is also available to download at the web address.

For more information, contact the Biodiversity Officer on: 020 8356 3438; or e-mail: kate.mitchell@hackney.gov.uk

Community care charging

RESIDENTS who receive community care services from the Council are being asked for their views on plans to change how much they pay towards their care.

The Fairer Charging Policy consultation is aimed at people using services such as getting help at home to assistance with personal budgets. Carers, service providers, Council staff, partners and residents are also being consulted. The survey runs until 10 October.

Service users have been sent information packs directly to their homes. The documents are also available on the Council website, at libraries and other public access points. Information is provided in a variety of formats including versions in easy read, Braille and large print. For more details call: 020 8356 6244. To take part in the consultation online, e-mail: consultation@hackney.gov.uk; or visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/fairer-charging
